Jones-Wynn Funeral Home was founded 60 years ago on the basis of faith, backed up with compassion, sincerity, and caring. It is a family owned business that established early on that family is more than a kinship. Drawing on their own experience, one thing that founders Clyde and Shirley Jones started in their business was to help all families as much as they could, especially young couples who experienced the loss of a precious child.

That caring has continued for some 60 years, and I guess you could say, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it". At Jones-Wynn Funeral Home we, to this day, offer our families an infant burial service at no cost to the family. Being fortunate to own Meadowbrook Memory Gardens, a perpetual care cemetery, we can offer the family a cemetery lot at no cost for their child. The cemetery lot is always in an area that has open spaces adjacent, so the parents may select spaces next to their baby, enabling the family to always be together. For our families that prefer cremation, we also offer to them a complete cremation service at no cost.

We can not begin to count the blessings that have been returned to us through the service we offer. This is just one way that we can give back, since we have been so richly blessed.

Things have changed greatly in the past 60 years, but the one thing that stands firm is family. Family is not just a relationship.......It is an inspiration.......it is our inspiration to care, to do what we feel is right and to always strive to be better.
